

Regarding a Peaceful Resolution

Observer, a path less traveled lies before you. The creature you face, while formidable in appearance, carries a burden not entirely its own. Look beyond the immediate threat and seek the root of its distress.

Consider that not all conflict requires force. Sometimes, a gesture of empathy, a forgotten word, or an offering of peace can alter the course of confrontation entirely. Listen to its movements, observe its patterns, and recall any fragmented lore or whispers you may have heard regarding its kind.

The key to resolving this encounter may not be found in steel or spell, but in understanding and connection. A peaceful resolution is possible, if you can find the way to offer it.
